Ten Salient Practices of Undergraduate Research Mentors

Facilitators: Dr. Jenny Olin Shanahan of Bridgewater State University, Dr. Elizabeth Ackley of Roanoke College, and Dr. Eric E. Hall of Elon University

The benefits for students engaged in undergraduate research and creative scholarship dependent on timely and high-quality mentoring. In-fact, mentorship is considered one of the defining features of undergraduate research and creative scholarship. As we strive to meet the increasing demand for authentic experiences, it is imperative to identify what effective mentors do to promote student success.

This interactive, live, and fun webinar workshop will lay out ten salient practices for undergraduate research and creative scholarship mentors. Handouts including examples and practical tips of each plus recommended readings will be provided. Participants can contribute their experiences and ideas regarding how each of the 10 practices relates to their particular discipline and mentoring style.
