Westfield State University offers a Certificate in Geographic Information Systems (GIS) for working professionals or professionals looking to get into the fields of city and regional planning, environmental sciences, public health, social services, homeland security, law enforcement, business and marketing, communications and media, political science and more. Only 12-15 credit hours. Courses are offered during the fall, spring, and summer. Courses may be taken during the day or evening. Some coursework from other institutions may be accepted in transfer after review by the certificate director. Admissions is on a rolling basis. Learn more at westfield.ma.edu/gis.