Frequently Asked Questions
MSW Field Practicum

What is the difference between “Field Practicum” and “Field Placement”?

The “Field Practicum” refers to the total field education experience, consisting of both a weekly integrative field seminar and a field placement.

When Do I Complete My Field Practicum(s)?

Practicums begin in the Fall Semester and continue across both the Fall and Spring Semesters in the same field site. Your program of study determines when you complete your Field Practicum(s).

- Full-Time (2 year): Foundation Practicum Year 1; Advanced Practicum Year 2
- Part-Time (3 year): Foundation Practicum Year 2; Advanced Practicum Year 3
- Part-Time (4 year): Foundation Practicum Year 2; Advanced Practicum Year 4
- Full-Time Advanced Standing (1 year): Advanced Practicum Year 1
- Part-Time Advanced Standing (2 year): Advanced Practicum Year 2

How Much Time Do I Spend in my Field Placement?

Foundation Placements are a total of 400 hours; this averages about 16 hours per week.
Advanced Placements are a total of 500 hours; this averages about 20 hours per week.

What is the difference between the Foundation and Advanced Practicum?

The Foundation Practicum is focused on the knowledge, values, and skills of the social work professional generalist practice core, while the Advanced Practicum provides the opportunity for students to deepen social work skills and apply more complex understanding of clinical social work practice.

What is the Weekly Integrative Field Seminar?

This seminar provides students with an opportunity to discuss and compare field placement experiences, learn from and teach each other, examine personal values and ethical issues in social work practice, and further integrate knowledge and experience through structured assignments, activities, and group process, which may also be connected to assignments in other courses. The overall goal of the practicum seminars is to help students make connections between their academic work in social work and their field experiences. In addition, by bringing students together from many different fieldwork settings, the seminars offer an opportunity to broaden each student’s exposure to the field of social work through the sharing of experiences and ideas in the seminar sessions.

During the Foundation Placement, students attend this seminar in-person weekly; the Advanced Seminar is currently a weekly online course. Students remain in the same seminar section during the entire placement. Assignments to specific seminar sections are made by the Field Education Director in order to provide the best possible learning environment for all of the seminar participants. The location of each student’s placement, students’ social work experience, and overall needs of each seminar group are considered in making these assignments. The instructor for the Field Seminar is also the student’s faculty liaison for the field placement, conducting site visits and serving as the primary contact between the social work program and the field instructor and field site.
When does the field placement process begin?

Students should understand the requirements and timing of field placements concurrently with acceptance into the program. Advance discussion with employers, family, and other support systems to consider adjustments to schedules and responsibilities is often very helpful in facilitating a successful field placement experience.

Full-time incoming students begin the field application process concurrently with acceptance to the program. Current (returning) students begin the application process early in the spring semester prior to upcoming fall semester that they are scheduled to begin a placement.

Can I choose my own placement?

Students work in a collaborative process with the Field Education Department to determine field placements. While students’ particular interests and needs are considered to the extent possible, it is important that students understand that the Field Education Department staff makes final decisions regarding field placement assignments and those decisions are based on many variables. Occasionally students will have an interest in a placement site that our program does not have an affiliation. This may open an opportunity for the Field Education Department staff to explore the feasibility of the potential site to determine if it meets the requirements for a social work field placement. In other cases, the lack of an affiliation with a particular placement site may be the result of a previous decision made by the Field Education Department and not be an option. Students should not initiate contact with a potential field placement site without discussion and approval from the Field Education Department.

Does my field instructor have to be a social worker? I know a great supervisor with a degree in psychology and I really could learn a lot from her.

CSWE standards require that all field instructors for MSW students have an MSW from an accredited school of social work. Additionally, the Commonwealth of Mass requires that field instructors have a social worker license, (LCSW or LICSW). Our program also requires that the field instructor have at least two years of post degree related experience.

My placement interests are very specific and I feel it’s important that I have several options and interviews so I can make the best decision. How does that work?

While meeting the student’s educational needs and program requirements are the first criteria for field placement, student preferences related to kind of setting and location will be considered to the extent possible. Every effort is made to arrange an interview that has a strong likelihood of being a good “match.” At the same time, there are several external variables that may impact field placement options and, while students might prefer to have several options, this is just not feasible and would not serve the best interest of the student or the program. For example, “waiting” to interview somewhere else could likely result in the original placement not being available since field placements are competitive (both within our program and with other social work programs). Geographic restrictions may exist which may make it necessary for students to commute some distance to their placement. In addition, some students will need to commute to access specific kinds of settings that are not available closer to their home. The availability of placements changes annually, so some students will need to accept placements that, while they may not exactly fit the student’s primary long-term interests, do provide substantial and appropriate learning opportunities. Some organizations only accept foundation or advanced year students; others have only a certain number of placements or have application deadlines. Students will interview with one potential site at a time and the results of that interview will guide next steps.

Where are placements located and how far will I have to travel for my placement?

Students should expect to complete their field placements in a location that is within a sixty-mile radius of Westfield State University. The social work program has affiliation agreements with well over one hundred field placement sites within this geographic area and continues to develop additional sites each year. While some students complete placements within a short distance from their home, other students will need to commute to access specific kinds of settings that are not available closer to home or WSU.

Can I see a list of placement options?
Placement options change very frequently and, therefore, we do not publish a “list” of placements. When you begin the field application process, field education department staff will talk with you about possibilities based on the information in your application and resume, conversations with you, your experience thus far in the social work program, and information from faculty that have had experience with you.

Can I do my field placement at my place of employment?

Students can request to complete one of their field placements at their place of employment. There are specific requirements for an employment-based placement that are available on the Employment-based Field Application and the Field Education Manual.

Are there any paid placements?

Paid placements (stipends) are extremely rare and students should plan to finance their education from other sources.

I have to work and can’t get time off. Can I do my placement in the evening and on weekends?

Students accepted in one of the full-time programs (traditional or advanced standing) will be eligible for placements that occur during daytime hours.

Students accepted in one of the part-time programs (3 year traditional, 4 year traditional, or 2 year advanced standing) will be eligible for placements that occur during daytime hours and may be considered for one of the very rare evening/weekend options or an employment-based placement. Within the limited number of placements with evening and/or weekend hours, most only accept students for the advanced year placement due to the expectation for more independent activities. The majority of placement sites require students be available during normal daytime business hours and students are strongly encouraged to plan accordingly prior to beginning the field placement process.

Do I stay in my field placement during the break between the fall and spring semester?

Students are expected to negotiate field placement hours during the semester break directly with their field instructor and in consideration of client and field site policies and obligations. Students are encouraged to collaborate with their faculty field liaison regarding any uncertainty about field placement during the semester break.

I saw something in the Field Manual about “readiness for field”…..what does that mean?

Students in the MSW Program will generally be considered to be ready to enter the field at the scheduled time for their chosen sequence of study. The social work faculty recognizes that all students come to the field experience with some areas of strength and some areas that need further development. Students are not expected (and should not expect) to be expert practitioners at the beginning, or at the end, of their field placement experiences. However, it is the responsibility of the Social Work Program, the Field Education Department, and each student in the program to make sure that students do not enter the field until they have achieved the level of knowledge and skill that is required for the protection and promotion of client, agency, and student well-being. For this reason, the Field Education Department may, upon occasion, recommend that a student delay entering into the field education portion of the MSW Program. The Field Education Manual discusses in detail the potential reasons and circumstances that may result in a student not entering field at a particular time in their education.

I still have questions after reading this FAQ document. What should I do?

Much more detail is available in our Field Education Manual. You are expected to review this manual in full before applying for field and throughout your participation in field. You can also view the Field Application and Employment-Based Field Application at the same site. Please note that these documents and manual are updated from time to time so you are advised to always assure that you are reviewing the most recent version (all versions are dated).
